

The Ecumenical Opportunity of the Diaconate:
A Comparative Study of the American Diaconate
in Episcopal, Lutheran, Roman Catholic, and United Methodist Churches

By

Benjamin L. Hartley

Spring, 2000
Boston University School of Theology

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter One: INTRODUCTION AND LITERATURE REVIEW .....	1
Historical Reviews with Comprehensive Intent.....	8
Denominational Perspectives .....	11
Contemporary Essays.....	18
Conclusion.....	20
 Chapter Two: METHODOLOGY.....	 24
 Chapter Three: RESULTS .....	 29
Respondent Demographics.....	29
Education/Formation Experience.....	32
Continuing Education.....	35
Time/Value Study .....	36
Job Satisfaction .....	41
Vision .....	45
Hope .....	47
Qualitative Survey Responses.....	48
Educational Resources Most Helpful.....	48
Effectiveness in Ministry .....	49
Hopes and Concerns for the Future.....	51
 Chapter Four: DISCUSSION.....	 55
 Chapter Five: SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS.....	 71
 Bibliography.....	 74
 Appendix A.....	 78

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This project was carried out in the context of a Boston University School of Theology seminar focussed around individual student research projects. I thank my fellow students in that seminar as well as professors Peter Berger and Claire Wolfeich for their encouragement and feedback on this project's research design. The generous financial assistance that Boston University School of Theology provided me through a Lilly Endowment grant helped me to maintain a focus on this project which would have been impossible had I lacked the support.

I also wish to thank the diaconal organizations which provided me with mailing lists and encouraged me in the project through our e-mail correspondence. Paul Van Buren of the Section of Deacons and Diaconal Ministries of the United Methodist Church went the "extra mile" in providing the mailing list as well as the labor, photocopying, and postage costs for mailing over 1,500 surveys. Deaconess Louise Williams of the Lutheran Deaconess Association, Carol L. Schickel of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Division for Ministry, Deacon Edwin F. Hallenbeck of the Episcopalian North American Association for the Diaconate, and Deacon John Pistone of the Roman Catholic Secretariat for the Diaconate were all very helpful in providing mailing lists to members of the diaconate in their respective denominations. Deacon Richard Pemble was also very helpful in coordinating people for me to interview in the Episcopal Church in Chicago.

I am indebted as well to my sister, Christine Huchthausen and to fellow student and United Methodist deacon candidate, Melissa Emerson for their help in inputting survey data into a computer database. My wife Laura, as always, was a tremendous encouragement and played an integral role as technical consultant in performing the statistical analyses. I suspect this will not be the last time both of our academic interests converge together in a single project.